Now Is Christ Risen From The Dead

And become the firstfruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

1 Corinthians 15:20-22.

God Was In Christ

Reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the world of reconciliation:

—2 Corinthians 5:19.

According To The Power Of God:

Who hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began.

But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. 2 Timothy 1:8-10.

We Are Sanctified

Through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

And every priest standeth daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins.

But this man, after He had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God Hebrews 10:10-12.

For God So Loved The World,

That He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

If Thou Shalt Confess

With thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

—Romans 10:9.

So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation. Hebrews 9:28.

CHILDREN'S STORY:

OWL RIVER BREAKS UP

By Gladys Diesel

A crow sat on a limb over hanging Owl River and watched the swirl of dark water sweeping over and around the broken chunks of ice. A young muskrat crawled out of the river and smiled at him showing his long yellow teeth, because he was so glad the crow had come at last. It had been a long cold winter! Mr. Crow cocked his head to one side, blinked his bright black eyes and said, "Caw, Caw, Caw, Caw, Caw, Caw, how are you, Billy, and your Maw?"

Billy took a bite from a juicy cat-tail root and looked aside at a doe and fawn before he answered slowly. "We are just fine, Mr. Crow, and all the farmers are ready to sow. Mrs. Duck came last night with some of the rest; they're looking for a spot to nest. Old River is grumbling for, as we know, Mrs. Jackfish and Pickerel are swimming below. I saw Old King Beaver looking out, I hope there aren't any traps about. Mrs. Robin Red Breast will be coming soon, probably arrive tomorrow at noon. A big, brown mink, looking silky as could be, went sneaking along past the willows and me. In a great big V, high overhead, geese are honking, Spring's here, we said! I haven't time to tell you more, of all the animals along this shore. But Old Owl River's a busy place, when the frozen smile gets off his face. I must run home now, fast as I can go, so good-bye, good-bye, good-bye, Mr. Crow!"

Chosen is the native name for Korea.

THE Homemaker

By BERTHA M. McCUTCHEON

The youngsters look forward to Easter and a visit from the Easter bunny. Gay baskets may be made from plastic strawberry containers by weaving strips of colored paper through the open spaces. Make a handle of wire wound with colored paper. The children themselves could prepare the baskets.

B. McCutcheon

To help fill the baskets some of the colored eggs could be prepared at home.

Two-toned Easter eggs are gay and easy to make. First one end of the hardboiled egg is dipped into a dish of food coloring then the other into a second coloring. The jagged edges of the join is concealed by a band of household cement, sprinkled with glitter. Rick-rack braiding or strings of sequins may also be used for decoration. Incidentally a dash of vinegar added to the coloring will make it more intense.

No Cook Candy Easter Eggs — Beyond getting the kitchen mussed up a bit you can get into no difficulty with this very easy recipe. The recipe may be used for making Easter eggs or icing a cake.

BASIC BUTTER CREAM FOR EASTER EGGS OR CAKE ICING

½ cup butter
2 cups sifter icing sugar
1 egg
1 cup skim milk powder

Let the butter soften at room temperature until easy to cream. An electric beater or good hand beater may be used. Beat butter until fluffy, gradually add half the sugar and skim milk. Beat smooth after each addition. Add unbeaten egg and mix thoroughly. Gradually beat in remaining sugar and skim milk. This mixture should be smooth and creamy. Yields 2 cups.

TO MAKE EASTER EGGS

1 cup basic butter cream
1 cup sifter icing sugar
Food coloring
Cocoanut
Nuts
Maraschino cherries as desired
Flavoring to suit
1 egg white, slightly beaten.

Gradually mix the sugar into the basic butter cream Divide candy into four portions, adding desired flavoring to each. Kneed each portion on a baking board, liberally sprinkling with sifter icing sugar. Add more sugar as needed. When easy to handle roll candy into egg-shaped pieces of the desired size. Nuts, maraschino cherries or other fruit may be rolled in the centre of each candy egg. Dip into slightly beaten egg white and role in white or tinted cocoanut. Candy itself may be colored if desired by adding a few drops of food coloring with the flavouring. Place on plate and cover with pliofilm, waxed paper or aluminum foil and let it stand a few hours or overnight in a cool place. Candy may be eaten at once but is better if flavours are allowed to blend.

Note: Suggested flavourings: 1 or 2 drops of peppermint; 1 or 2 squares melted chocolate and almond or vanilla extract to taste: ¼ to ½ teaspoon vanilla extract; ¼ to ½ teaspoon almond extract: 1 teaspoon grated lemon or orange rind.

To use basic butter cream as icing:- Combine desired flavorings and add extra icing sugar if necessary to make the desired spreading consistency. Chopped raisins, pineapple, cherries or nuts may be mixed with icing.

Of the 2,265,430 Alberta hog carcasses graded last year, only 22.3 percent were Grade A. This was the lowest of any province in Canada. Prince Edward Island led all provinces in quality with 53.3 percent of marketings making the top grade.

How Do You Stand?

By Dr. K. W. Tenove, Chiropractor

Good posture has been a thing to admire—something to delight the eye. From ancient times to the present, an erect posture has been regarded among all races as a thing of beauty.

Soldiers march . . . . a man sitting in the saddle . . . . an athlete displaying his physique . . . . bathing beauties on parade. None of these would have grace and charm without good posture.

It has remained for modern times to discover that correct posture contributes to good health. We now know that it is a foundation of good health while poor posture contributes to poor health. Avoidance of many kinds of illness begins with the right posture, the correct position of the spinal column, either sitting, standing or walking. Careful attention to posture is one of the keys to personal health, happiness and comfort.

How do you stand????

TIPS FOR PARENTS

By HELEN R. HEWSON
(Parent Education Associates)

SOME of our favorite correspondents are grandmothers. One grandmother writes, "Our daughter's little girl was three in November, the boy will be five in June.

"They are busy little people and well cared for. The little girl talks well and freely but the boy does not respond to adults when we have him out.

"What can we do to help him answer adults before he starts to school in September?"

There are wide variations in the development of speech, differences in the ages at which children talk, in vocabulary, and in conversational ease. And boys are usually slower in developing speech skills than are girls.

Personality also has an effect on speech. The lively, out-going child talks at an earlier age than the quieter, more cautious child.

OPPORTUNITY

There are also differences in opportunity. Children learn to talk by being talked to, even when they are tiny babies.

If mother is hurried, pre-occupied when bathing and dressing the baby and does not bother to talk to him, or if the tone of her voice is complaining, worried, the baby will not respond.

Then there are the families who overwhelm children with chatter, or who coax, comment and urge the child to "speak up."

In these families a child may feel very unsure of his speech ability and keep quiet in self defense.

Experiences that lie somewhere between these two extremes are most helpful for the child who is learning to talk.

Perhaps the most important factor of all in the child's developing speech skill is his general physical, social and mental growth and well-being.

HIS WANTS

In the early stages of learning to talk the child uses words to express his own wants and feelings, to communicate with others.

As he grows older, usually between four and five years, he becomes more aware of speech as intercommunication, as a means of exchanging thoughts, feelings, of discussing mutual interests.

Lowell Croft, on behalf of the family, presented Mr. and Mrs. Hanning with a chest of silver. Mrs. Robert Bennett of Edmonton then presented Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Croft with a bridge set. Both recipients were gracious in their replies of thanks.

The evening was spent in dancing, cards and games which all tended to make this special occasion a memorable one.

Family members present were: Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Bennett and Barbara, Howard McLuckie, Mrs. Harold Tardt, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lindbeck and girls, and James Croft of Edmonton; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Greenwall, Bonnie and Rhena of Wetaskiwin; Mr. and Mrs. L. Closing Service Exercises Held At Baptist Indian Bible School

Closing services at the northern Baptist Indian Bible School were held April 1 to 3 with Rev. William Laing, pastor of Bethel Baptist Church, Calgary bringing most of the messages.

Rev. Herbert Montgomery, Whitehorse, Yukon, and Rev. Royal Knapp, Watson Lake, B. C., also assisted with the meetings. These men showed slides of work among the Indian people at their home points.

Musical numbers by the students and others were special features at each service. The ladies, trio, consisting of Dorothy and Rose Johnson and Elizabeth Cardinal, students from Paddle Prairie, deserve special mention as well as the choir, comprised of the students and Rev. and Mrs. Jackson who sang Sunday afternoon.

Some 85 persons from points as distant as Good Fish Lake, Kikino and Hylo packed the main building for the Sunday afternoon service. Many had come in for the three days of meetings and stayed on the campus. Meals were served at the Bible school kitchen.

The Bible school, opened last October in the former Mangeon public school under the leadership of Rev. Frank Wilson and Rev. Billy Jackson.

Mr. Wilson, who had ministered to the Indians in the Good Fish Lake and Kikino districts for several years, felt the call of God to train converted young Indian men and women to take the Gospel to their own people.

Mr. Jackson, himself a Treaty Indian, had received training and graduated from the Berean Bible College, Calgary, a few years ago. He spent some time in evangelistic work in Saskatchewan and the Yukon before coming to teach at the Bible school.

When the Mangeon school building and land was put up for sale last summer it was purchased by Mr. Wilson and the northern Baptist Indian Bible School came into being. Other buildings were purchased from Imperial Mills and moved to the campus. Much toil and prayer has gone into the project by those in the area who are interested in the plight of the Indian people.

Five students, Dorothy and Rose Johnson and Elizabeth Cardinal of Paddle Prairie, Roy Smarch of Whitehorse and Alfred Cardinal of Good Fish Lake, attended classes throughout the winter months. Rev. Mr. Jackson, chairman of the board, Rev. Mr. Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. D. Goldsmith taught the various subjects comprising intensive study of the Scriptures, public speaking, English and other related subjects. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, who are both gifted musically, trained the students in singing and conducting.

Response to the work of this Indian Bible school has been most encouraging. The staff is prayerfully laying plans for an increased enrolment for the coming year and many improvements to the classroom and dormitories are expected to be completed during the summer.

Let's not be worried: some tightwad, even now, may plan to leave some of his cash to the service of the community.

The Three Faces Of Eve

This is the true story of one of the most remarkable cases of multiple personality in all medical history, told by the two doctors who treated the case. Two different and distinct personalities were battling for possession of the patient's body. Mostly, Eve White, a shy, demure housewife, was in command. But occasionally Eve Black, a saucy flirtatious playgirl, emerged. The patient seemed to improve during hospitalization, but later, her agonizing headaches began again.

Chapter 8

By Corbett H. Thigpen, M.D., and Hervey M. Cleckley, M.D.

During the next year we kept these two personalities, Eve White and Eve Black, under close observation. The patient usually came twice a week for an hour's interview with her therapist.

With the permission of both ladies, tape recordings were made of each as she worked with the physician through many hours of therapy. Tape recordings were also made when her parents gave the extensive history of her early life.

Eve White and Eve Black each took the Rorschach and other psychological tests. Electro encephalograms were made of them separately. Their handwritings were studied and compared by a well-qualified expert.

Each consented to our making moving pictures. Our first pictures were on silent film but we later obtained a study with sound. By this means they were for the first time, one might say, able to see each other.

Eve Black because of her access to the other's thought while latent had, of course, an approximate idea of her alternate, of how she would speak and move and bear herself. Watching the film with obvious amusement, she commented from time to time when Eve White expressed an opinion or straightened herself in the chair, "Wouldn't she, now!" When the film showed Eve White get up and walk across the room, the disdainful observer murmured, "Mincing!"

STILL AND TENSE

Eve White, on the other hand, studied the film with solemn gravity. When it ended she sat still and tense in her chair. Embarrassment showed in the faint pink spots on her cheeks, in the withdrawal of her eyes. She sat silent for a few moments as if seeking her customary outward poise.

We had never heard Eve White speak unkindly of another. Not in sarcasm, but humbly and in the truest spirit of charity, she at last found herself able to say in a low serious voice, "I suppose . . . I mean one could say there's a lot about her that seems fresh and . . . really . . . right attractive. She does seem so young."

Eve White according to her employers was able and industrious at her job; serious, methodical and and unfailingly courteous, she made an excellent impression.

The routine of Eve White's days was seldom varied. During working hours she kept her mind on the task before her. Preoccupied with her responsibilities, she seemed unable to avail herself of the little breaks by which others in the office found relief from the pressure of steady concentation. She often smiled at jokes that circulated from desk to desk, but never seemed to join freely in the laughter and the banter.

MADE OWN CLOTHES

After work was over, she spent much of the time in her room. Skillful and assiduous at needle work, she made all of Bonnie's clothes and many of her own. Each day she wrote a letter to Bonnie, seeking to convey a mother's steady devotion.

She sometimes took a walk in the little park near the boarding house, alone or with one of the other girls. At night she often read until bedtime or occasionally played cards with the group downstairs. She attended church regularly taking an inconspicuous part in its activities.

Over this year of close observation Eve White showed no important change in her essential personality characteristics. Her new environment, the responsibilities of work, freedom from the routines of housekeeping, the attractions and diversions of a city much larger than any in which she had previously lived seemed to alter her habits and attitudes very little if at all. She showed no spontaneous tendency to develop new interests.

Despite occasional brief eruptions of her alternate during the hours of work, Eve White held her first job for approximately two months. Perhaps Eve Black was influenced more than she admitted by recognition of the necessity that her sober partner retain her position. It was obvious that Eve White must maintain a source of livelihood in order for Eve Black to subsist.

LOST HER JOB

Usually the adventurous one restricted her longer excursions into the outside world to weekends or to evenings when Eve White's absence would not be particularly conspicuous or evoke inquiry. Apparently incapable of holding steadily to any course, and only transiently motivated by any cause, the lighthearted Eve slipped out every now and then in the office, during the lunch hour, and on other inappropriate occasions.

Eve Black's occasional pranks were tolerated by her employers for a long time before their cumulative effect caused Mrs. White to lose the job.

Except for relatively brief periods just after losing or giving up a job, Mrs. White remained steadily employed. In her basic aim to provide support for Bonnie by her own efforts, she was on the whole successful during this period of approximately a year.

Eve White found herself severely handicapped in establishing simple friendships with others who worked with her in the various jobs she held and lost. It was difficult too, for her to participate in little plans for diversion or ordinary social life that other girls at the boarding house suggested.

FRIENDS BEWILDERED

She soon found that she must keep each new acquaintance at arm's length in order to avoid as much as possible, and for as long as possible, their discovering the unpredictable intrusions of the other manifestation. These intrusions, even when Eve Black was relatively co-operative and undramatic, left anyone who had become acquainted with Eve White tingling in bewilderment.

The Rorschach and other tests that had been made revealed nothing important about either Eve White or Eve Black that was not already known.

From any patient's responses in such tests one can, if he likes, theorize indefinitely, and by the manipulation of the currently popular dynamic concepts, work out explanations of dubious validity along any line he might choose. Such explanations, however, often depend upon arbitrary assumptions about contents of the unconscious that are never demonstrated, rather than on what is recognized as evidence. Speculations of this sort offered little or no assistance in understanding or in dealing with our problem.

It is, however, interesting to note that the Rorschach record of Miss Black was interpreted by the clinical psychologist as "by far healthier than the one of Mrs. White." He felt that Miss Black's record indicated a predominant hysterical tendency and that Mrs. White's showed "constriction, anxiety, and obsessive - compulsive traits."

"BRIGHT NORMAL GROUP"

On the Wechsler - Bellevue intelligence scale Mrs. White's I.Q was estimated as six points higher than that of her alternate. Of each however, the psychologist reported:

"There is evidence that the native intellectual endowment is well within the bright normal group . . . ; in Mrs. White's case anxiety and tenseness interfere, in Miss Black's superficiality and slight indifference as to achievement are responsible for the lower score."

These technical tests threw little or no light on the important questions that still confronted us. They did not bring us any understanding of how or why the manifestation called Eve Black had emerged; nor could we find in them anything that helped explain how Eve Black had access to Eve White's thoughts and memory while Eve White remained unconscious of the other's entire experience.

Was this professed unconsciousness real and complete? So indeed it appeared.

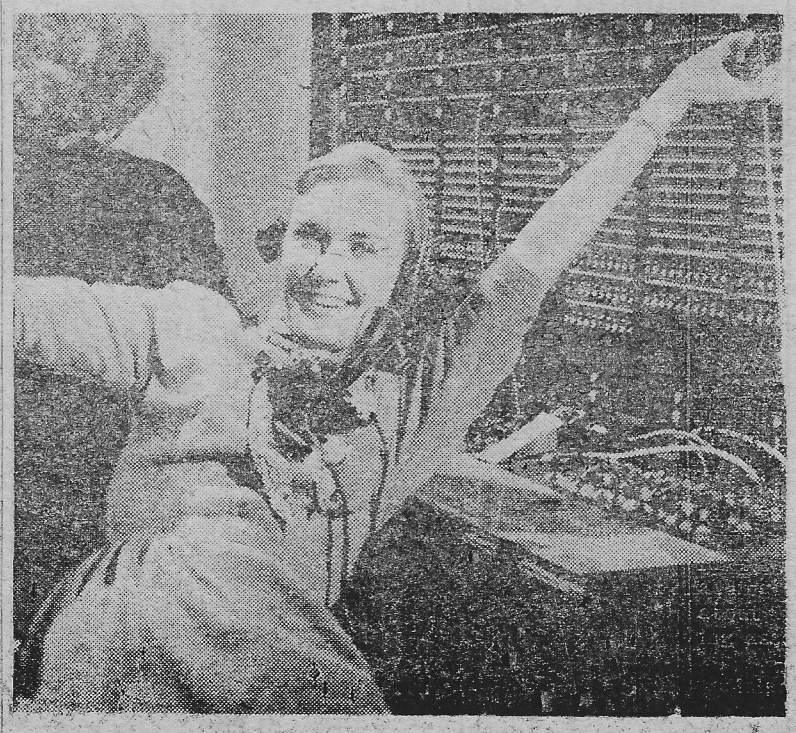
A RESTRAINING INFLUENCE

Despite her disavowal and apparent disregard of them, was it possible that some of Eve White's principles and viewpoints at times exerted an indirectly restraining influence on the irresponsible Eve Black? Did something of what she knew only as "the other Eve" unconsciously play an invisible part in her behavior, perhaps serving sometimes to present her from taking a final step into dangerous situations?

Often enough the daring Eve retreated leaving her sober and cautious sister to deal with problems that she found too difficult to face. Perhaps, even when absent, the conservative Eve's qualities and judgment came into the equation whenever matters became critically serious for the other.

Both Eves denied awareness of any such interaction. During the many months of observation no blending or mingling of their characteristic traits was even momentarily observed. Each, with remarkable consistency, played her own role, denying any direct participation in the aims and goals or personal experiences of the other. After all this time each remained unalterably herself.

Next week — With dramatic suddenness, a new element enters this strange case. (From the book The Three Faces of Eve, copyright 1957 by Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Cleckley, and published by McGraw - Hill Book Co., Inc.). Distributed by The Register and Tribune Syndicate.



EVE WHITE found difficulty holding jobs because the lighthearted Eve Black slipped out every now and then in the office.

Ottawa Report

By Anthony J. Wright

Some of the prettiest grils in Quebec seem to find their way to Ottawa to work for Members of Parliament. They and other Parliamentary secretaries were given good news in the Fleming budget —the workers of the Commons stenographic pool got a raise. Most MP's believe that the secretaries hereabouts are worked too hard. Many members have to share a secretary. One I talked to early in April wanted to get back to his western riding before the Easter recess but had too much work to do here. Reason: After 3½ months in Ottawa he had not had enough time to answer all his incoming mail, partly because he only had half a secretary.

Anthony Wright

But when it comes to being overworked, the worst jobs in Ottawa are in the Prime Minister's staff. Not that John Diefenbaker is any harder to work for than Mackenzie King. It's just that anyone working for the nation's chief lives, as one of them said recently, "in a panic from morning till night". Dief's office day begins before eight o'clock.

I hope that the prime minister will be generous to his staff when they get over to London for the Commonwealth Prime Minister's conference and that little wedding between Mr. Jones and Miss Windsor.

One of his staff is hoping to travel from London up to Barnsley to visit his family. But if past conferences are anything to go by he won't get a chance. Most members of a visiting p.m.'s staff get so little free time on these jaunts that they often cannot get out of their hotel rooms to have lunch.

What takes all the time in London? Not so much the demands of John Diefenbaker or Howard Green but the constant telephone calls from secretaries working for the conference hosts—viz: the British Government. Apparently British civil servants spend so much time cross-checking arrangements for meetings, talks, etc., that their Canadian counterparts find it hard to get away from the phone long enough to relax.

I asked an attractive secretary going with the Canadian party whether she hoped to see anything of Britain, a country she has never visited. "No, there won't be time!" she replied. "Why don't you just take a day off and go shopping, once you've gone they'll never find you in London!" I told her. "If we did that, we'd never get another foreign trip like that. We have to be available all the time, otherwise there'd be no point in taking us along," came the wistful reply.

So, being on the staff of a Big Shot and planing all over the world is not half as glamorous as it may appear to be to ordinary mortals like you and I.

Incidentally, the Prime Minister has not yet been able to get anyone to fill the Press Secretary job left vacant by Jim Nelson. Jim is back at work with a wire agency here, having done the tough East Block assignment for two or more years. He did it well.

The newsboys here feel that Dief the Chief will not get anyone as good as Jim for the vacancy unless he pays more—up to $10,000 a year and gives the press secretary some kind of autonomy and independence.

Canadian leaders don't like having press secretaries and Diefenbaker always prefers to grab the headlines personally and not through a medium.

BRIEFS FROM ALL OVER

Senator J. Wesley Stambaugh was nettled because I described him as a Conservative. He laughed when I said he'd probably be able to live it down. . . . Margaret's intended, A. A-J., explaining why he paid only ten shillings for a cheap pair of riding boots before going hunting with the Pytchley, said, "I know they don't match but when you are on a horse nobody sees both sides at once" . . . a man after my own heart, I hope his wife does not try to make him over. . . . A CBC insider tells me that next year Press Conference will be revamped to put a little spark into it. One suggestion: that reporters not rehearse things before they meet the "victim". Another suggestion: That they start interviewing the guest instead of behaving as though they were lions and he was a Christian.

Watkins Challenges Assessment Program

Ernest Watkins (PC—Calgary Glenmore) asked the Alberta government to provide for an appeal against uniform assessments to be made on industrial plants, pipelines and powerlines.

The assessment program is the first phase of the government's proposed provincial industrial tax plan. The remainder of the plan that would permit the province to collect taxes on behalf of the municipalities would be introduced at a later date.

Mr. Watkins' request was made when the house was giving second reading to a bill authorizing the government to launch the assessment.

The lone Conservative member said assessment of large plants, power transmission lines and pipelines will be a complex procedure, adding there may be argument about the value of the property being assessed.
